

A DRIVING KILLER

Details on Setting and Locations

A Driving Killer's story is set in Sooke, a village on Vancouver Island, Canada. Doris Gabereau is on holiday with her friend Clifton Gilford at The Honeysuckle, a B&B owned by Eleanor and Gilbert Travis. Doris, unfortunately, is brutally killed during the night. Inspector Lloyd Hatfield and his sergeant, John Nettle, run an elongated investigation of the few suspects both on the island and on the mainland. Hatfield enlists the assistance of the CSI team to find the murder weapon – a “driver” club. In the end, the culprit – Gilbert Travis – confesses to the crime. He bashed Doris’s head in with the club when she would not share the winnings of her lottery ticket with Gilbert.

Although isolated from the big city, Sooke and surrounding areas is not excluded from hosting a murder or two on occasions. Don’t anyone be fooled by its outward tranquility. Sooke will conceal the worst of criminal elements. Visitors Beware!

List of Prominent Locations in the Story:

Sooke Village – South of Victoria on Vancouver Island.

The Honeysuckle B&B in Sooke

Tudor style house; gorgeous garden setting going down to the water’s edge of the Pacific Ocean.